Serbian president says all U.N. hostages will be released

Officials may have pilot still alive

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials are receiving signals that could come from the pilot of the Air Force F-16 that crashed over Bosnia, a senior Pentagon official said today.

Signals alone aren't enough for officials to conclude that the pilot is alive, but it is "encouraging," he said. "We are doing our utmost to locate the pilot," he added.

The fighter, whose pilot has not been identified, was shot down Friday by a Serb surface-to-air missile in northern Bosnia while on a combat patrol.

A Pentagon official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the signals were emitted in a pattern that could indicate the pilot — or whoever was in the cockpit — is making the plane deliberately.

The plane has not been receiving beeper signals since it was shot down, he said. The official noted that the F-16's engine was reported to be "underbelly" by the missile, and the rear end of the plane was exploding and the front was falling through the clouds.

Officials did not find the front end of the plane, but the official said, leaving open the possibility that the pilot was ejected before crashing.

However, there is a chance someone could find the wreckage and is using communications device carried by the pilot.

Serbs gather peacekeepers in preparation for departure

Associated Press

PALE, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Serbia's powerful president said Monday that he had persuaded Bosnian Serbs to release all of the more than 250 U.N. peacekeepers still held hostage.

President Slobodan Milosevic's office in Belgrade said in a statement that his chief of security, Jovica Stanisic, reported Bosnian Serb leaders had "responded positively" to demands to quickly release the hostages.

Sources in Pale said the hostages were being gathered from the locations where they were being held in preparation for departure. The moves repeated developments Friday when 121 hostages were freed, but it was unclear exactly when this group might go free.

Freeing the hostages would defuse the Bosnian Serbs' latest standoff with the international community as well as strengthen Milosevic in his bid to get debilitating economic sanctions lifted against Serb-led Yugoslavia.

Milosevic's announcement came minutes after Stanisic arrived in Pale, the Bosnian Serbs' headquarters nine miles from Sarajevo, in a four-jeep convoy with about a dozen Serbian secret police.

The Greek defense and foreign ministers had arrived earlier Monday for talks with rebel Serb leader Radovan Karadzic in a surprise initiative to win freedom for the hostages.

The Greeks are Orthodox Christians like the Serbs and are the only Western nation to have maintained strong ties with Belgrade and Bosnia's Serbs through more than three years of Bosnian war.

The Bosnian Serbs had toughened their line on releasing the remaining hostages over the weekend. Their commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic, vowed not to let more go without guarantees that NATO will not repeat its May 25-26 airstrikes.

NATO jets blew up rebel ammunition dumps outside Pale in retaliation for the Bosnian Serbs' artillery strikes and sniper attacks in Sarajevo.

Milosevic's statement treated the release of all hostages as a done deal, and added: "The international community and all sides in the conflict should use this moment of relaxation of high tensions to ... move towards peace."

Milosevic officially severed ties with the Bosnian Serbs last August, but has flexed his muscles there in recent days to bolster his standing with the West as a peacemaker.

That could translate into wringing more concessions in negotiations to lift international sanctions imposed three years ago.

The world had seemed more than ever set on a collision course with the Serbs since NATO defense ministers decided in Paris on Saturday to form a rapid deployment force.

Up to 10,000 U.N. peacekeepers in Bosnia.

The force's mission and command structure are vague. But the danger of getting sucked directly into Bosnia's war could grow if the force were to fight its way through roadblocks or other impediments.

Wind storm gusts up to 100 mph, knocks out power, damages homes

By MARGRETA SUNDELIN
Senior Reporter and Associated Press

Winds as high as 100 miles per hour blew across Monday, ripping roofs off houses, overturning cars on the interstate and leaving thousands of homes without power.

A 3/4-inch hail accompanied the storm, which tore nearly 100 miles of Interstate 80 to the north of Salt Lake City. The Utah Highway Patrol reported at least 17 cars tipped by the winds, which were gusting to 75 mph at Wendover, 120 miles west of Salt Lake.

Numerous reports of injuries, many from flying debris, were received by police. Harried police reported roofs being blown off houses by 100 mph winds in Alton American Fork, 40 miles south of Salt Lake, and in Tremonton, 68 miles north of the capital city, where gusts were measured at 109 mph.

Pat, a dispatcher at the Orem police department, said that Orem residents "were very lucky." She said that there were minor problems with power outages and toppled trees but that there were no reported injuries or instances of major property damage.

Gary Lancaster, assistant director of the Sandy police department, said that there were no reported injuries and that none of the reported traffic accidents can be considered to be directly caused by the weather.

A dispatcher at the Logan police department, who declined to give her name, said that they had no major problems there either. She said that the most commonly reported problem was snapped power lines and property damage that she contributes to falling trees and power lines.

The storm, moving from the northwest, had already wreaked havoc in Nevada when its front plowed into the populous Wasatch Front about 6:30 p.m. The skies turned black, the branches started coming down and the roofs started coming off.

The storm was accompanied by lightning and large hail in some areas. Yost, on the Utah-Idaho border 121 miles north of Salt Lake, reported 3/4-inch hailstones.

National Weather Service meteorologist DanLeBlanc said winds were measured as 68 mph in downtown Salt Lake.

Utah Highway Patrol Sgt. Dennis Bringhurst said he expected the 99 mile stretch of I-80 between Tooele and Wendover to remain closed until at least midnight.

"We just don't have enough troopers to handle all of the accidents," he said.

Aside from the 17 commercial haulers blown over, Bringhurst said there were several private vehicles that had been damaged and stopped by the winds.

"But it's slowing down some now," he said about 8:30 p.m. "At least you can stand up in it now."

Reports of injuries were widespread, but as of late Monday there were no immediate reports of weather-related fatalities.

KSL-TV reported that the roof had been blown off a Mormon Church in Bear River City, 61 miles north of Salt Lake in Box Elder County. The National Weather Service reported numerous instances of trees being blown over.

Train ride gives police first-hand view of crossing danger

By MATTHEW WRIGHT
Universe Staff Writer

A truck drives around the corner, barricades at a railroad crossing. Flashing lights and a train horn don't convince the driver to stop. The back of the truck, four feet high, is in the way. The driver watches, their innocent faces reflecting the approaching danger. This is like this are common at railroad crossings throughout the state of Utah, as well as the nation. More than 600 people died in railroad crossing accidents in the last 10 years, 17 of those in Utah.

Efforts to reduce this number include public awareness, law enforcement officers from Salt Lake and other cities were invited Thursday to ride a train and witness first-hand the danger drivers have for locomotives.

how fast the train may be moving before they make the decision to cross in front of it, said Michael Brand, road foreman of engines for Southern Pacific Lines.

"People underestimate the speed the locomotive is going," he said. "They think they have time to make it across."

Another area of public misunderstanding involves the ability of the train to stop in case of an emergency. People think the train is going to slow or stop for them if they don't make it across — but it can't.

The train carrying the law enforcement officers on Thursday was travelling between 20 and 30 mph. At that speed, even in case of an emergency, it would take the train a half-mile to stop, Brand said. A train travelling 60 mph, a normal speed for a freight train, requires 1.4 miles to stop.

"It is the most helpless feeling," said Brand. "I have been fortunate, I have only had close calls." How close have those calls been? "I have cleared them by less than a foot," he said.

Part of the "Trooper on the Train" program involves the officers on board radioing ahead to their counterparts near the crossings, to inform them of illegal crossing.

If someone is caught refusing to yield the right of way to a train, they can be fined up to $675 and kept in jail for 90 days, said a Provo 4th Circuit Court clerk.

Operation Lifesaver Inc. is a non-profit public information program based in Alexandria, Va. The program tries to promote railway safety by educating the public on the hazards of interfering with locomotives. Marmie Edwards, communications director for Operation Lifesaver Inc., said.

According to a press release, the program was established in 1972 in Idaho by the Union Pacific Railroad in response to increasing national averages of highway-rail crossing-related deaths. Since then, 48 states have joined with Idaho. As a result of the increased attention, the number of deaths has decreased by 50 percent.

In 1981 there were a total of 9,295 collisions at railroad crossings. The number dropped to 4,921 in 1994. The success of the program is due to the work of volunteers who want to do something about the high number of fatalities, Marmie said.

Each state has its own railway safety committee that seeks out opportunities to inform the public by way of free presentations.

The presentations are given to any group and often stress the human side of railway accidents.

"Putting a face on the victims brings it a lot closer to home," Marmie said.

Brand's grave voice as he conducts the 204-ton train adds seriousness to the issue of train safety.

The helpless look in his eye tells a story.

"People just can't wait that extra 30 seconds to one minute for the train to pass."

Devotional to focus on good cheer

Geoffrey J. Germane, BYU professor of mechanical engineering, will explain how inertia, entropy and Heavenly Father's love for his children are reasons students have to be of good cheer.

A Devotional featuring Germane will be held today at 11 a.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall.

Inertia is the tendency of matter to remain at rest if at rest, or, if moving, to keep moving in the same direction, unless affected by some outside force. Germane will be relating inertia to a friend or enemy who pulls someone toward or away from coming unto Christ.

Entropy is a measure of the degree of disorder in a substance or a system. He will relate entropy to repentance and how students can be of good cheer through repentance.

Germane said he understands the pressures on college students, such as the anxiety of marriage, graduating and where to live, and hopes his message will comfort students.

"My intent is to have people leave the meeting with an optimism of the faith that the Lord is with them and will be there for them through all of their trials," Germane said.

Cult leader to be indicted for gas attack

TOKYO — Investigators reportedly have proof in hand that Shoko Asahara, the bearded, partially blind leader of the Aum Shinri cult, had an active role in the March 20 nerve-gas attack on Tokyo subways. That paves the way for the next step — Asahara's indictment.

The formal accusation is expected as soon as this morning, because investigators' powers to interrogate him without charges are about to expire.

Murder charges against the cult leader would mark an important psychological milestone in a traumatic case that has shattered Japan's self-image of safety and order.

Asahara, 40, was arrested May 16 in a coffin-like secret chamber at the Mount Fuji commune of the Aum Shinri Kyo cult.

He was detained on suspicion of murder and attempted murder in the subway attack, where sarin nerve gas killed 12 people and sickened 5,500 others.

Thirty-three followers have also been arrested.

About a dozen of them who played key roles in the attack were expected to be formally charged when their detentions for questioning expire.

Poll reveals Utahns support term limits

SALT LAKE CITY — Most Utahns want a constitutional amendment to limit terms of members of Congress, and they don't want Utah lawmakers to repeal a statute that limits terms of the governor, attorney general and legislators.

The findings were revealed in the latest copyright poll conducted by the Deseret News and KSL-TV published Sunday.

The poll was conducted after the U.S. Supreme Court ruled 5-4 last month that states can't limit the terms of their U.S. senators or representatives by statute.

The ruling means that term limits on a national level can be imposed only by a change to the U.S. Constitution.

The ruling invalidated at least part of a law passed by the 1994 Legislature imposing 12-year limits on national officeholders. The law wouldn't have taken effect until 24 other states passed similar statutes.

IBM launches $3.3 billion bid for Lotus

NEW YORK — IBM launched a $3.3 billion hostile bid for Lotus Development Corp. on Monday, that would be the biggest software takeover ever.

The deal would significantly alter the personal computer software industry, giving International Business Machines Corp. a portfolio of products to better compete with Microsoft Corp. Lotus is perhaps best known for its 1-2-3 spreadsheet program.

IBM indicated it could be an unfriendly takeover, saying it had started legal action to prevent Lotus directors from using a "poison pill" anti-takeover strategy.

Lotus did not yet have a response ready, a spokesman said. IBM offered $60 a share for Lotus, which has about 55 million outstanding shares. The offer is nearly double Lotus's current value.

The cultures of the two companies are vastly different and Lotus executives worry the company would disappear in the IBM bureaucracy.

Shepherd criticizes Congress at conference

SALT LAKE CITY — Former Rep. Karen Shepherd was the keynote speaker at the Utah's chapter of National Organization for Women's annual conference Saturday at Westminster College. Shepherd recently returned to Utah after a semester as a fellow at the JFK School of Government at Harvard University.

The National Organization for Women can't afford to be silent while far-right extremism rages in Congress, Shepherd said.

"Politics responds to the loudest voice," Shepherd said. "Please be the loudest voice."

The reform under way in Congress right now, Shepherd said, is aimed at dismantling many of the programs NOW members feel passionate about.

"I have a feeling that a sense of what is happening in America hasn't hit here — what is at stake and what we're about to lose," Shepherd said.

The 104th Congress has taken the worthy goal of reducing the budget deficit and twisted it, Shepherd said. The money-saving cuts Republicans are pushing are in reality aimed at furthering an ideological point of view that leaves many families and individuals — women, men and children — stranded.

Permit required for visiting Timpanogos Wilderness

By MATTHEW WRIGHT
Universe Staff Writer

In an effort to determine exact user-figures for the wilderness area and to prevent it from being run-over and destroyed, the Pleasant Grove Ranger District has instituted a permit system.

Tim Garcia, wilderness coordinator for the Pleasant Grove Ranger District, said anybody who wants to use the area Friday evenings, weekends and holidays must obtain a free permit.

The permits can be access through a member of the Timpanogos Emergency Response Team.

A member of the response team will be at the head of Aspen Trail, three miles from Sundance, and Timpanokee Trail in American Fork Canyon, Garcia said.

He said the district ranger's office wants to know the frequency of current use for the mountain trails so it can regulate the use of the area in the future.

The use of the wilderness area will not be limited by the permits beyond the traditional number of 15 people per group.

With continued heavy use, the trails in the wilderness area will become worn, ruining them for future use.

By issuing permits for the area, the rangers hope to discover the exact number of hikers who use the Timpanogos trails.

Knowing the number of hikers, rangers can set limits on a trail's use, Garcia said.

The wilderness area is a popular destination for day trips — 93 percent of the area's visitors stay for one day, he said.

"Most people hike to Mt. Timpanogos summit, to Emerald Lake or choose a shorter hike to waterfalls," Garcia said.

Special Olympics a success despite rain

ALESJA THOMPSON
Universe Staff Writer

Weekend rain didn't stop about 100 athletes from convening at the Special Olympics on Friday and Saturday.

Although the continual rain did pose some problems for the Special Olympics, everything went well, said Jarvis, Special Olympics director.

The rain was an inconvenience," Jarvis said. "(But) everything went smooth."

On Thursday, the Olympians were able to get through almost everything, which included the athlete registration, wheelchair competition, pre-game soccer, preliminary gymnastics and the opening ceremonies.

"I made it through fine," Jarvis said. "I got the important stuff covered."

On Friday, they moved everything into the Smith Field House until it cleared up outside, Jarvis said.

Events included the track and field competition and the aquatics competition.

According to Jarvis, Saturday's events included the gymnastics, more track and field competition and the equestrian competition.

Adult soccer competition, however, moved into the Smith Field House.

"I did they had a lot of things that 'went by the wayside' because of the rain. 'It is not easy to have 1000 athletes,'" Jarvis said.

"The Special Olympics overall, I think the good outweighed the bad."

It was especially evident in the number of volunteers that showed up to help at the Special Olympics.

"I had lots of good help," she said. "It was excellent."

Family righteousness topic of fireside

By PYE HIRSCH
Universe Staff Writer

Examining the influences of anti-family trends through personal righteousness and scripture study was the theme of a message given by Elder Neal A. Maxwell at a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Fireside in the Center Sunday.

Elder Maxwell, a member of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, gave the message at a Sunday evening fireside which was broadcast to young people throughout North America.

"Anti-family trends influence our lives, crushed or contained by your righteousness so far as your loved ones are concerned," Elder Maxwell said.

Elder Maxwell outlined several "anti-family" trends that threaten the family unit, such as premarital cohabitation, pre-school divorce, births to unmarried women, children not living with biological fathers. "These trends are so common, especially to the institution of the family," he said.

Elder Maxwell said reversing the effects of these trends is neither simple nor easy, but can be achieved by building and strengthening the family.

of society's fingers," Elder Maxwell said.

"Many things will not get better until we have better families, but this will require much more self-denial, and ironically, self-denial is a quality that's developed in loving families."

Elder Maxwell encouraged Church members to utilize advances in technology, including increased mobility and enlarged educational opportunities, to better serve God and share the gospel.

BYU graduate photographs Colombian life

By JEFFREY FLINT

Destroying Colombia's stereotypical image as a nation of drug traffickers is the goal of Neil Millman, a BYU graduate and international, semi-professional photographer.

"Personal Perspective of Colombia and Portugal," a collection of Millman's work in color, is on its last day of display today in the Wilkinson Center Art Gallery. The 156-piece collection consists of "National Geographic" type photographs from Venezuela, Mexico, Antigua and five Central American countries, with its primary focus on Colombia and Portugal.

"I think it's more beautiful in Cali than dangerous," Millman said about his experience in one of Colombia's most populous cities. "Don't take the negative warnings too seriously."

Millman spent a year teaching English in Colombia, visiting Cali, Medellin and Bogota.

"My emphasis is to show the positive side of Colombia," Millman said about his photographs. Millman's selection of photographs largely highlights anonymous individuals from a kaleidoscope of ethnic heritages and in a variety of street scenes. One of the shots illustrates a man getting a tattoo on a curb, another captures a police officer on duty.

"He took his pictures from a different angle," said Karina Burgos, 22, a senior from Guayaquil, Ecuador, majoring in Spanish translation. "It wasn't the professional angle that you always see, but it helped me look at the picture from a different perspective."

"I like the way you can see the culture of the people," said Telma Sobral, 20, a senior from Lago, Portugal, majoring in European studies and Russian. "The simple, small, yet important things in their society."

"You can see the differences between the age groups and the way they dress," Sobral said specifically about the "Faces of Portugal" section of the display. "However I would have added to his display some enlargements and black-and-white photographs," Sobral said.

While finding Colombians to be "very amiable, genteel and open" Millman said he was often asked by university colleagues there, "Why do Americans hate Colombians?"

Millman thinks the answer might be as basic as the stereotypes we receive from the media and simple misunderstandings.

Since his graduation from BYU in 1981, Millman has traveled to 56 countries around the world collecting memories and pictures despite language barriers.

Pooh brought to life in 'Bother!'

By SHARON SUMMERHAYS
Universe Staff Writer

That lovable old bear who resides in the house at Pooh Corner will be brought to life through the talents of British actor Peter Dennis as he presents "Bother!" a whimsical Winnie-The-Pooh reading, Thursday and Friday at 7 p.m. in 151 TNRB.

The curators of the McCurdy Historical Doll Museum invited Dennis, a British screen and television actor, in connection with the Friends of the Harold B. Lee Library.

Dennis will perform selected verses and readings of Winnie-the-Pooh taken from the stories by A.A. Milne.

During a semester in London for study abroad, former BYU professor Monroe Paxman and his wife, Shirley, were delighted by the charms of the simple little bear stuffed with fluff.

The Paxmans invited any of their students to join them as they made a pilgrimage to the town of Hartfield, east of London, to visit the home of A.A. Milne and the site of the 100 Acre Woods.

There they visited with the real Christopher Robin, the son of A.A. Milne, and saw the original stuffed animals, which have been presented to the children's section of the New York Public Library.

When they returned to London, they happened to find a newspaper announcing a reading of the "Hum Pooh" at St. John's, near the Parliament.

"It was such a whimsical, magical event," said Paxman of the reading.

The reading was performed by opera singers and dramatic readers from the Shakespearean Theater. Inspired by that reading, the Paxmans began a Winnie-the-Pooh birthday party tradition at the McCurdy Historical Doll Museum.

Peter Dennis was brought to their attention through their daughter in Chicago. She had seen his performance of "Bother!" and told her parents that it was the most delightful evening her family had ever spent, Paxman said.

Dennis was introduced to Winnie-The-Pooh at age 36. He began his performance of "Bother!" in 1976 as part of the celebration of the 50th birthday of Winnie-The-Pooh.

Tickets are available in the HBLL Copy Center, the Bookstore cashier's office, and the McCurdy Historical Doll Museum, at 246 N. 100 East in Provo. Tickets cost $10 for children eight and over, students, faculty, and seniors, and $12 for adults.

Drew Linginfelter/Universe

OH, BOTHER! Winnie-the-Pooh, shown here in a Bookstore display, will be featured in the reading "Bother!" Thursday and Friday at 7 p.m. in 151 TNRB.

Springville hosts annual Art Days

By SHARON SUMMERHAYS
Universe Staff Writer

Concerts, quilts, historic homes, drama, and art exhibits are among the events that color the palette of the Art City Days in Springville, which lasts through Saturday.

The Utah Old-Time Fiddlers will perform a concert at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the Spring Acres Arts Park in Springville. The band uses acoustic instruments to produce old-fashioned country and bluegrass music.

Postal employees and musicians have teamed up to form the Salt Lake City Letter Carrier Band, which will end the Art City Days Saturday evening with a free concert. They will perform a variety of show tunes, marches and popular music. After the concert there will be a fireworks display.

The Springville Museum of Art will host the 22nd Annual Quilt Show in connection with the Utah Quilt Guild. The display hosts 54 quilts submitted by quilters from across the United States. Quilts by Nimble Thimble, a local organization, will be on display in the Art Shop Friday and Saturday, along with several quilts in progress.

The Springville Historic Preservation In-Home Tour will open eight of Springville's historic homes Friday and seven more on Saturday.

A four dollar fee will be charged to tour all the homes.

The Arts Day Community Theater will present the musical "The Music Man" June 8-10, 12, 16-17 and 19 at the Springville High School Auditorium. The Springville Playhouse will run the musical romance "Goldilocks" June 9-10, 12, 16-17 and 19.

Local trails rival more popular Moab trails

By JOHNELL SWAN
Universe Staff Writer

Slick Rock, Dead Horse Point, Poison Spider and other Moab trails are not necessarily the Utopia for all mountain bikers. Utah County conceals its own incredible and breath-taking trails.

"Moab is fun to go to because it's different, but in my personal opinion, this area (Utah County) is better," said Matt Ohran, an employee at Gorilla Bicycles and Fitness and Provo native. "Most people don't ride where I ride though. I can ride for three hours and not see anyone."

Local mountain bikers seem to have the market on less-crowded trails. One Provo resident said local bikers are protective of their trails and don't give out their locations very often.

"You have to earn your right to run on trails around here," said Joshua Jenkins, a Provo native and avid biker. "It's like a club. You only divulge your trail to people who will give you a trail in return."

"I've gotten a lot of maps to trails from people just writing in the dirt," he said.

All is not hidden, however. Some local bikers agreed to share their less secret, favorite trails.

Six Waters trail is one of Jenkins' favorite trails. The trail is located near the sulphur Hot Pots in Diamond Fork Canyon, a branch of Spanish Fork Canyon. Six Waters goes down Diamond Fork Canyon to Sheep Creek Road and is a more advanced trail for an experienced rider.

Six Waters belongs to a longer series of trails, mentioned by both Ohran and Jenkins, called the Great Western Trail.

The Great Western Trail was designed by the Forest Service to link Mexico and Canada. Loyal Clark, public affairs director for USDA Forest Service has biked some of the trails on the Great Western.

"The Great Western Trail is a corridor of trails that runs the entire length of the State, and can be accessed at many different points usually near cities," Clark said.

The Forest Service started the Great Western Trail about six years ago for all recreation opportunities. The trail was designed to accommodate as many recreation users as possible.

According to Clark, several groups, including recreation and environment groups, have been involved in the development of the Great Western Trail.

The Great Western Trail includes the following trail possibilities: Provo River Parkway, Heber Valley Loop, Daniels Canyon, Utah Lake Loop, Timpanokee Road, Lake Mountain, Sundance Resorts, Hobbie Creek, and Squaw Peak Road.

The Great Western Trails, however, are not the only options for good biking.

Chad Horman, a student majoring in wildlife and range management and native of Pleasant Grove, enjoys riding Dry Canyon in Lindon.

"The trails are usually fire trails with a bunch of whoop-de-dos and downhill rides," Horman said. "It's a fun ride."

Dry Canyon can be reached by taking 100 North in Lindon and following it straight through past some residential areas.

Universe file

PEDAL ON: Cyclists enjoy riding along the calm waters of Utah Lake at sunset. Utah County boasts many trails that rival more popular mountain biking areas in Moab and St. George.

For the die-hard biker, Millcreek Canyon may offer more of a challenge. There is a $1 entrance fee, "but it's worth it," Jenkins said.

The trail is well groomed and climbs through wooded forests for most of the ride.

"It's about a 6,000 foot incline," Jenkins said. "It passes by two little glacier lakes. The highest lake is Desolation Lake, about 10,500 feet high."

"From Desolation Lake, you can look down on Park West's and Park City's highest chair lifts. You're way up there," he said.

There are two loops on the trail. The lower loop takes about 10 minutes up and back and ends at Dogleg Lake. The higher loop ends at Desolation Lake and is more suited to experienced, well-conditioned riders.

Not all trails demand a lot of experience. The Y trail, or bench trail, is a good trail for someone in decent shape but not necessarily an expert.

"The Y trail is the most popular one because it's the closest and it doesn't get muddy up there," Ohran said. "The trail is a more gravelly terrain so it never gets muddy."

The Y trail starts at Rock Canyon and leads into Springville. The start of the trail is located in the canyon at the temple. A parking area is located at the base of the trail.

For the beginning or first-time biker, the Provo River Parkway trail and Bridal Veil trail may be more suited.

Hogle Zoo, Best Friends sponsor animal adoption

By DREW LINGINFELTER
Universe Staff Writer

Students living in housing that prevents them from having pets can fulfill their longing to have a furry friend through alternative means.

The "Adopt a Wild Child" program at Salt Lake City's Hogle Zoo allows everyone the chance to call an animal their own. "It gives you a sense of helping out an animal," said Gary Tingey, promotion coordinator at Hogle Zoo.

"The animal you adopt kind of becomes a part of you," Tingey said.

A variety of pets are available for adoption, including fruit bats, pigeons, salamanders, turtles and wolves. When an animal is adopted, it remains at the zoo so visitors can continue to enjoy it, but the adopter does receive special benefits.

The "parent" of the animal receives a certificate of adoption, a bumper sticker, and invitations to special adopted member events.

Adoption fees vary with each animal. A fruit bat can be adopted for $20, while the snow leopard is $300 and the African elephant $1000. These fees are used to help buy food for the almost 1,400 animals at the zoo.

For students who want to have a pet at home, Best Friends Animal Sanctuary in Kanab, the largest non-euthanizing compound in the country, usually has at least 1,500 dogs, cats and rabbits to adopt and keep. The sanctuary also has horses, burros and pigs that are adoptable but remain on the premises.

Gregory Castle, a co-founder of Best Friends Animal Sanctuary, said

ON ALERT: Several slender-tailed meerkats can, for $40, be adopted. They are part of a zoo adoption program in which community members can sponsor an animal.

that anyone interested in adopting an animal can always come to the sanctuary.

The easiest way to adopt, especially if the adopter is not in Kanab, is to go to a PetSmart store and ask about the "mobile adoptions." The sanctuary charges $50 to adopt a dog or cat. Castle said this charge is to cover what the sanctuary has done for the animal.

"That price includes spaying or neutering, shots, and most of the time nursing back to health," Castle said.

Tours of the sanctuary are given twice each day. Best Friends can be reached at (801) 644-2001.

ALL-AMERICAN STRIDE: Multi-purpose track star Tiffany Lott cleared the hurdle in the hurdles in a meet earlier this year. Lott came in fourth at the NCAA Championships with three All-American titles, a fourth place finish. BYU track athletes earned All-American BYU track athletes returned from the NCAA Track and Field Championships with All-American honors.

Lott, Mark Johansen, Amy Christiansen and Craig Lawson earned their All-American status, while Mike Jones earned her first All-American award.

Lott claimed a fourth All-American award by winning the four-day meet, earning honors in the heptathlon, 1000 meter hurdles.

In her first 1995 All-American award, Lott won the opening day of the meet by throwing 166-7 in the shot put, good enough for a fifth-place finish. She then proceeded to place sixth in the heptathlon on Saturday, earning 5,589 points, and then battled for an eighth-place finish in the shot put, qualifying her for two more All-American awards.

"I did a really good job," Lott said. Head coach Craig Poole said, "It's unfair that she had to run the shot put right after finishing the heptathlon. She could've been in the top three based on her performance in the preliminaries, but she didn't."

Lott's shot put performance appealed to meet officials, but the race delayed so Lott didn't have her strength before the shot put. Officials only delayed the shot put 10 minutes, allowing Lott to have 15 minutes between the shot put and the heptathlon.

Univ. sophomore Amy Christiansen turned in a fine performance, winning her fifth-place finish in the shot put, second All-American award in many years. Christiansen won her 1994 NCAA shot put eighth place finish by nearly four feet farther at the meet.

Runner Craig Lawson won his second All-American award by finishing fifth in the 10,000 while freshman Rhoads ended the meet in 11th place, just short of All-American status as well.

Univ. sophomore Mark Johansen qualified for the steeplechase finals, finishing eighth against some stiff competition in the finals. The eighth-place finish allowed Johansen to earn All-American standing, but he was unable to finish the steeplechase.

Univ. sophomore Mike Jones qualified for the second-place finish in the 400 meter hurdles in the preliminaries of the 400 meter hurdles on Wednesday, but fell short of the finals by finishing fifth in his heat with a time of 51:55. Freshman high jumper Marc Chenn, another surprise qualifier for the men, turned in a leap of 6-11, four inches short of his personal best of 7-3 that was set at the WAC Championships. The 6-11 mark placed Chenn 17th in the high jump.

Hurdler Dixie Williams was a late qualifier for the women in the 400 hurdles. She ran one of her best races of the year, but finished the day in 22nd place with a time of 1:00.18. Discus thrower Petra Juraskova ended her event in 13th position with a throw of 155-6.

Distance runners Janeth Caizalitin and Melissa Teemant were All-American finishers for the Cougar women at the 1994 NCAA Championships, but both had a disappointing meet as they failed to qualify for the finals of the 1500.

Coaches from both teams were generally pleased with the effort of their athletes but admitted they had hoped for better results.

"All in all we did well," Poole said. "Everybody gave it their best. The attitude was tops and we did as well as we could. We would've liked to have done a little better in some events, but the competition was tough."

"We did better at last year's meet and it didn't turn out like we had hoped this year, but there was no problem with effort," men's coach Willard Hirschi said. "Everybody gave it all they had but there was just a lot of good people competing."

The future looks good for the women's team, which returns the entire group of NCAA qualifiers from this year.

"We've got work to do and improvement to make but the future is bright," Poole said. "We're looking forward to next year."

The men's team will be losing three NCAA qualifiers from this year's team. Johansen and Jones will be graduating, and freshman Marc Chenn will be leaving the team for two years to serve a mission in Los Angeles. Rhoads and Lawson will be returning for one more year to anchor the squad.

"We have a good group coming back," Hirschi said. "We also hope to sign some top recruits in the next few months that will help us tremendously."

Team winners for the NCAA Championships were LSU for the women and Arkansas for the men. Arkansas won its fourth straight men's team title by scoring 61 1/2 points, while the LSU women won their ninth consecutive women's team crown scoring 69 points.

The Cougar women finished the meet tied for 22nd with 12.5 points. The men accumulated 4.5 team points for a 47th place finish.

Kim Morris signs with BYU hoops

By SCOTT CORFIELD
Universe Sports Writer

Former Utah Valley State College Wolverine basketball player Kim Morris has signed with BYU.

Morris is a 5-8 guard from Orem who has just finished her second season with UVSC, where she earned Honorable Mention NJCAA All-America honors in her sophomore season.

"I'm very excited," Morris said. "I'm looking forward to playing with the Cougars next season."

Wolverines assistant coach, Cathy Nixon, said Morris averaged 13.6 points, 5.5 rebounds, 4.9 assists and 2.0 steals her first-year at UVSC.

"Kim is a very aggressive player," Nixon said. "She's great at penetrating to the basket, has good range and can pass the ball."

Morris improved her stats in scoring and in steals her sophomore season with 14.8 points and 3.0 steals per game.

Nixon said scoring isn't the only thing Morris can do on the court.

"She's an emotional leader on the floor," Nixon said. "She was the heart of our team."

BYU women's basketball coach, Soni Adams, was coaching at Salt Lake Community College when Morris was playing for the Wolverines.

"She's very intelligent, very intense," Adams said. "She just has this leadership presence about her."

Although one of Morris' strengths is leadership, she said she is a little fearful about filling that role on the team.

"I was recruited to help be a leader on the court," Morris said. "But I'm really nervous about that."

Morris also brings with her a desire and determination to win.

"She has the expectation that her team is going to win," Adams said. "Some players have that, some don't."

Adams said that last year's team struggled with confidence on the court and hopes Morris will help to motivate their team next season.

positions Adams said Morris could play for the Cougars.

"She's very versatile," Adams said. "If you're playing the point guard position, you've got to really have a lot of confidence in your ball handling skills and Kim has that."

Morris is more than happy to play either position for BYU and said she will contribute wherever they put her.

"I like them both," Morris said. "I love to penetrate and I love to shoot."

While Morris was at UVSC, she helped lead the Wolverines to a second place finish in the tough Scenic West Athletic Conference. As a prep at Mountain View High School, Morris helped lead the Bruins to the 1993 Utah State 4A state title.

Morris joins top Canadian prepster Renae Hansen and Jenny Anderton, a prep standout from Pinkerington, Ohio, as Cougar signees.

Rockets ready for Magic

Associated Press

GALVESTON, Texas — On the road again.

The Houston Rockets won their only final time on Pelican Island Monday before taking their highly successful road show to Orlando. For this team, there's no place like away from home.

If the Rockets can win Game 1 of the NBA Finals Wednesday night, they'll tie league playoff records for most consecutive road victories (six) and most road victories in one season (eight).

"We have the same confidence no matter where we go," Robert Horry said. "If we go down to Mexico, we'll have the same confidence."

It's a confidence born in last year's championship season and nurtured through a precarious playoff run that saw the Rockets come back from the edge of elimination against Utah and Phoenix, then win three in a row in San Antonio in the Western Conference finals.

"It's amazing what we've done," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "While you're on a streak, you don't even think about it. But after you get some time to reflect on it, you say, 'How the heck could we do that?'"

The only other team to win six in a row on the road was Chicago in its 1991 title run. The 1981 Rockets were the only team to win eight road games in the playoffs.

That Houston team also was the only No. 6 seed to advance to the finals, until the Rockets did it this year.

The Rockets' playoff run was all the more remarkable because they played 16 games in 30 days. They had their first day off in more than a month on Friday, then went to Galveston for three days of preparation before leaving for Orlando Monday night.

"I think the timing was just about perfect for us," Tomjanovich said. "We had a nice rhythm going, but how long can you go at that pace? To get a little bit of a break and get re-energized is what we needed."

Hakeem Olajuwon, already facing repeated questions about the matchup with Shaquille O'Neal, said fans are getting a chance in these playoffs to see what the NBA can be.

"You can talk about a lot of sports, but basketball is in its own league for entertaining, for competitiveness," he said. "You can't compare any sport with basketball. That's just the reality."

creativity and putting what one wants in with what one needs.

Travis Claborn, a sculptor from Oklahoma City, Okla., said only about five percent of the sculptors have experience in the field. The other 95 percent just enjoy playing in the sand for a living.

"Where else can you play in the sand and get paid for it?" he said.

Sand sculpting can be dangerous and no one under 18 is allowed to work for the corporation. One cubic foot of sand can weigh 118 pounds, so if a 12-foot wave fell on someone it could kill them, he said.

The finished sculpture includes a water tower, a 12-foot wave, whales, dolphins, under-water fish and plant life and a mermaid.

ShopKo security guard assaulted in robbery

m Police Department is ee suspects in connection lifting and assault incident ed Saturday afternoon at on 125 S. State in Orem.

Ko security officer was nconscious at about 2:30 n he tried to apprehend g in the parking lot, said Police Detective Gerald atching the suspects take oise out of the store, the security officer asked other ShopKo employees to be in the parking lot to provide assistance in confronting the shoplifters. But upon entering the parking lot, employees found the security guard lying on the ground unconscious and saw a red Geo Metro driving away from the scene.

"Before driving away, the suspects folded up their license plate so it could not be seen," Nielsen said. "However, we did get the suspects on video tape."

The first suspect is described as a male Polynesian, 6'3", 240 pounds, with black hair in a pony tail, the tip of which is bleached. He is in his early 20's. The other two suspects are both female in their late teens. One is believed to be a Caucasian with long blonde hair and the other a Hispanic with long brown hair.

"They apparently used no weapons," said Ray Cheatham, the ShopKo clerk who examined the video tape. "We assume the Polynesian suspect simply hit our security guard in the eye and knocked him unconscious. He suffered a black eye and loss of memory of the incident."

Otherwise, the security officer did not suffer serious injury.

2 more jurors dismissed during O.J. trial

LOS ANGELES — The judge in the O.J. Simpson trial dismissed two more jurors Monday, leaving just two alternates.

But the defense raced to an appeals court to challenge the removal of one of the panelists.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito did not say which jurors he had dismissed or why.

Ito said only that he found good cause to "dismiss two of the jurors presently seated."

The dismissed jurors were a 28-year-old Hispanic woman from Pico Rivera who works as a real estate appraiser for Los Angeles County, and a 54-year-old black man from Lynwood employed as a postal operations manager.

The two were missing when jurors were escorted from the jury chambers near the courtroom after Ito ordered the delay.

The pair have reportedly been under scrutiny for some time.

An ousted black juror complained the Hispanic woman showed signs of racism against blacks on the panel.

The Hispanic woman also reportedly passed a note of warning to another panelist, who was ultimately dismissed.

Geneva Steel warehouse burns; lightning strike is possible cause

By CHRIS COVEY
Universe Staff Writer

A lightning strike may be responsible for a fire that destroyed a Geneva Steel warehouse Friday morning leaving a rubble of burned supplies, but no injuries, according to a press release.

The wooden building, called the PM warehouse, was one of the original structures on the Geneva property, said Joe Walker, manager of media relations for Geneva.

It served as headquarters for the construction companies while the steel mill was being built during the early 1940s.

More recently, the wooden building was being used to house wiring, metallic molds and spare parts, Walker said.

A construction worker at the site said he saw lightning hit the building just before the fire, according to the press release.

Geneva's on-site fire department, consisting of 16 fire fighters and a fire truck, responded to the blaze. But after realizing additional help was needed, the Vineyard and Orem Fire Departments were summoned for support.

"The building itself had little value," Walker said. "The loss in supplies and equipment has not been assessed."

No other structures were threatened by the blaze, nor was production at the plant impacted, according to the press release.

Addictive drugs obtained legally

Local businesses ban drug found in some diet aids

By CARRIE MORIN
Universe Staff Writer

Ephedrine, also known as ephedra, is a drug found in many over-the-counter diet and allergy products and has caused a heart attack and strokes in some Provo women under the age of 35.

A 24-year-old woman had a heart attack because she was using diet drops that contained ephedrine, said Terry Bastian, a pharmacist for B&H Pharmacy who also works at a hospital.

Ephedrine, a dangerous and habitually addictive drug, is also a powerful body stimulant which sometimes leads to heart problems, strokes and chest pains, said Bruce Woolley, a BYU professor for the Food Science and Nutrition Department.

In Provo, many of the pharmacies have stopped using ephedrine in prescriptions and have discontinued selling over-the-counter allergy pills containing ephedrine because people began buying them for the rush instead of the medicinal purposes, Bastian said.

Rob Moyer, a pharmacist for ShopKo, said because addicts like the rush ephedrine gives them, stocking ephedrine products is a hassle. Pseudo-ephedrine is more common because it does not provide as large a rush and is more precise as a decongestant, said Bastian.

Because ephedrine provides a rush and gives the user more energy, many dieters do not care about the consequences of use, said Carolyn Brown, an employee at Dr. Christopher's Herb Shop and Natural Food Markets. Although tired dieters use ephedrine to supply energy, the dieter should realize sleep or healthy food is needed, said Brown.

Pep product samples were placed by the herb shop's front desk until Brown realized children were coming by and taking about five sample packages and using them for a high. Brown sampled a diet product once with ephedra in it and experienced tight temples and wrists, common symptoms of high blood pressure caused by ephedrine use.

Dieters see results and lose weight within the first couple of weeks because the body speeds up many of its natural processes and burns more calories, said Woolley. However, the body develops a tolerance for the drug and larger dosages are needed to get the same results, he said.

Because of the addictive properties and danger related to ephedrine, the use of ephedrine is banned by the Olympic Committee and other governing bodies of athletic events.

Congress to consider wilderness bill

By MARGRETA SUNDELIN
Senior Reporter

After months of conducting research and holding public hearings, Utah's congressional delegation will present the final version of a controversial wilderness bill to Congress today.

According to Rep. Jim Hansen's office, the bill will be presented in both houses of Congress, followed by a press conference in which the sponsors will be available to answer questions and discuss the bill.

Environmental groups, such as the Utah Wilderness Association, have called for congressional representatives to allot between 2.9 and 5.7 million acres of wilderness lands.

County officials, ranchers and other agriculturists, however, have asked that only 1 million acres be covered under the new bill.

While exact figures will not be released until the bill has been officially presented, George Nicus, assistant coordinator for the Utah Wilderness Association, said he has been told by some members of the bill's drafting committee that the bill will move to protect 1.8 million acres.

Nicus said that this is a disappointing figure, especially because public opinion polls have shown that Utahns were hoping for more land to be protected under the new bill.

"We are very disappointed because there isn't any way that the most important ecological treasures can be protected under such a proposal,"

Nicus said. "The public has been ignored, and it appears that the delegation had their mind made up before they even began the hearings."

The bill is the result of a joint effort by congressional delegates and Gov. Mike Leavitt's office to protect wilderness areas in Utah.

The effort was first announced in January of this year followed by five investigatory public hearings held in the month of April.

The bill will now proceed to the House Subcommittee on National Parks, Forests and Public Lands, a subcommittee headed by Hansen. According to Hansen's office, congressional public hearings will be held in Utah in June to gather more information.

Dr. Geoffrey J. Germane

BYU Professor of Mechanical Engineering

Geoffrey Germane has been extensively involved in automotive research (principally with internal combustion engines) and coal research at BYU's Combustion Laboratory and Advanced Combustion Research Center. He has conducted studies on synergistic antiknock additives, alcohol fuels, high-energy automotive fuels, lean-limit internal combustion, and the effects of engine parameters on fuel economy and exhaust emissions. His current research involves creating engine fuels from newsprint.

Presently fuels consultant to the National Hot Rod Association and technical consultant to automotive-related research and engineering companies, he has also provided engineering design advice to organizations involved in energy and transportation research. He has served on the Utah Legislative Committee on Alternative Fuels and is a member of the Technical Advisory Committee of the Specialty Equipment Manufacturers Association Foundation.

Dr. Germane earned bachelor and master of science degrees from Rose-Hulman Institute of Technology in Terra Haute, Indiana, and his PhD in mechanical engineering from BYU. His doctoral dissertation was honored as the outstanding engineering dissertation for 1978 by the university's Sigma Xi chapter. Selected twice as Outstanding Teacher by mechanical engineering graduating seniors, he is a member of Phi Kappa Phi, Sigma Xi, and the Society of Automotive Engineers.
